DestinationNEXT 2019 Futures Study

three transformational opportunities to help destination leaders formulate strategic decisions heading into the future. Together, they provide an integrated framework designed to both grow the visitor economy and support the mandates of local government, industry and community organizations.

1. Destination Stewardship

Balancing economic development, sustainable tourism and quality of life.

2. Community Alignment

Building public support around a shared vision for the destination.

3. Digital Conversion

Connecting with visitors on mobile devices to drive real-time sales in-destination.

THE NEW TOURISM LEXICON: REWRITING OUR INDUSTRY'S NARRATIVE

"A destination marketing organization (DMO) or convention and visitors' bureau (CVB) is an organization that promotes a town, city, region, or country in order to increase the number of visitors. It promotes the development and marketing of a destination, focusing on convention sales, tourism marketing, and services."

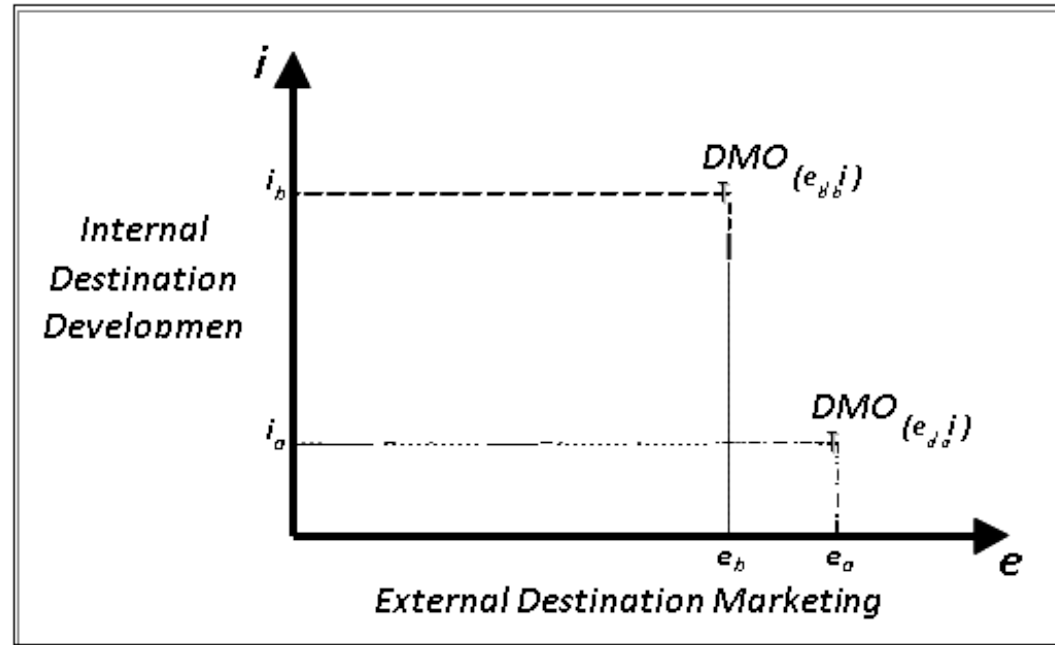

Let's rewrite that to more effectively communicate the value of our organizations:

"A destination organization is responsible for promoting a community as an attractive travel destination and enhancing its public image as a dynamic place to live and work. Through the impact of travel, they strengthen the economic position and provide opportunity for people in their community."

Travel Megatrends 2020: Tourism's New Competitive Advantage Is Protecting Destinations

If destinations that are to remain competitive and attractive to visitors for years to come will have to start protecting their communities and cultural capital now with this shift in approach requiring reimagining the way that destination marketing and management intersect — as well as incorporating the concerns of local stakeholders into the tourism boards' strategic planning.

America Outdoors: Consumers Are Flocking to These 5 Activities

Consumers are looking for activities to help them stay occupied and healthy as COVID-19 necessitates social distancing. As a result, a number of outdoor categories have experienced explosive growth, our Retail Tracking Service data shows.

Typically, June is a critical selling month for the outdoor industry. In this article, we explore five outdoor activities consumers have flocked to and analyze how June 2020 dollar sales stacked up to last year.

Crowds, Trash, Overrun the Eastern Sierra, CA

During the summer months, large amounts of visitors descend upon the region, and this summer tourist season is pushing the region to its breaking point. More and more people are traveling closer to home with travel restrictions in place due to the ongoing Coronavirus pandemic. With Southern California a 5-hour drive away, and the San Francisco Bay Area having access via mountain passes during the summer months, the Eastern Sierra is being overrun.

“I have never seen our public lands busier. I have never seen as much violation of rules as we are seeing right now such as illegal campfires, dispersed fires, trash dumping, and vandalism.” – Deb Schweizer, Inyo National Forest Public Affairs Specialist

Innovation in Rural Tourism

- Innovation = capacity to change and adapt (Kanter, 1983)
 - New knowledge
 - Implementation
- Research on rural tourism innovation is extremely limited (Booyens & Rogerson, 2016; Marasco, DeMartino, Magnotti, & Morvillo, 2018)
- Little evidence of knowledge transfer from explicit, research-based knowledge sources (Hallin & Marnburg, 2008; Cooper 2006; Hjalager, 2010)
- Shared experiences and interactions favor local, tacit knowledge (Hoarau & Kline, 2014)
- Destinations as cognitive systems (Varra, Buzzigoli, & Loro, 2012)
- Lyons, Miller, & Mann (2017) ID an explicit role for Extension in facilitating networks and rural innovation systems

Roles of the DMO in destination management

- Leadership and coordination: The DMO has a leadership role in tourism within the destination; it sets the overall direction for tourism in the future. There are many others involved in tourism in the destination, so the DMO also acts as a coordinator of the efforts of everyone on the destination team.
- Planning and research: The DMO has a key role in preparing tourism policies, plans and strategies for the destination. It conducts research on existing and potential target markets to guide future marketing and product development decisions. The DMO tracks the programs of its main competitors and continually seeks out best practice case studies to improve product development and marketing.
- Product development: The DMO has the overall responsibility for the sustainable development of the tourism product including physical products, people, packages, and programs. It takes inventory of the current destination offerings and assists with continuous product quality improvements. Additionally, the DMO identifies new tourism product development opportunities and provides assistance in realizing these projects and programs.
- Marketing and promotion: The DMO develops the overall marketing strategy and prepares long-term and short-term marketing plans for tourism. It identifies the priority target markets and selects the most effective image or identity for the destination, culminating in the implementation of an effective branding approach. The DMO uses the integrated marketing communications method combining online and traditional promotions to inform and persuade tourists to come to the destination.
- Partnership and teambuilding: The DMO puts together an effective destination team and builds alliances to achieve the destination's product development and marketing goals. Some of the partnerships are established within the destination, while others are with external parties including travel agencies, tour operators, transportation providers, MICE planners, and others.
- Community relations: The DMO acts as the main champion and advocate for tourism within the destination by raising the awareness and profile of tourism locally to support the achievement of its product development and marketing goals. Additionally, the DMO may consult with community residents when making important decisions that will affect their lifestyles and living standards.

Moving Beyond Marketing

- WVACVBs requires 40% of budget directed to advertising

“Its much bigger than marketing. Marketing is the number one thing, but in order to do marketing, you've got to have your product development.”

“We have to stop relying on our natural attractions to stay a competitive tourism destination...people like Ohio are dumping tons of money into trail development... [our destination] is going to fall behind if we don't reinvest.”

“Product development is small business development. ... When there is an event, a Broadway show on a Tuesday night at the theater and there are 2,500 people going to that venue, filling up the Bridge Tavern, drinks before they go and drinks after dinner...this theater is driving that market...you can specifically say that it was the programming that brought the people to the community.

Leadership, Partnerships, & Engagement

The destination is “three primary things: the power of people, the power of product, and the power of partnerships. ... that’s my job: to make sure that those three things work together.”

Abstract—Previous studies indicate that tourists' destination choices are increasingly influenced by perceptions of sustainability but research has not taken visitors' insights and sensitivities about sustainability into account. This study examines how visitors to West Virginia perceive tourism development in the state. Findings indicate that visitors' perceptions are heavily homogeneous and that they are more concerned about environmental and socio-cultural sustainability than about economic sustainability. Males are not significantly different from females in their perceptions of all seven subcategories of tourism sustainability. However, visitors' lengths of stay are positively related ($p < .05$) to their perceptions of environmental protection and their satisfaction is positively related ($p < .05$) to frequency of visits. Finally, local visitors are more willing than nonlocal visitors to pay fees and more for higher quality services.

1.0 INTRODUCTION

While it is generally recognized that tourism, regardless of its form or location, should be planned, developed, and implemented to be environmentally, economically, and socio-culturally sustainable, sustainable tourism development still means different things to different people in different places. Although people tend to relate the concept of sustainability to its ecological dimension, economic achievement is often more valued than environmental and socio-cultural sustainability (Ratz, 2006; Towner, 2002). This is particularly true in developing countries and in less developed regions of developed countries where tourism is viewed as an important component of local or regional economic development. In addition, for entrepreneurs, investors, regional planners, developers, and politicians, economic sustainability may be a more immediate priority than environmental and social sustainability. The opposite may be true for environmental interest groups who are especially concerned about the environmental consequences of tourism development. Moreover, local residents may perceive different aspects of tourism sustainability differently than visitors (Cortwell et al., 2004; Geotici, 2006).

Past research has looked at tourists' sustainability from the perspective of local residents but studies on visitors' perceptions of sustainable tourism development are relatively scarce. According to Cortwell et al. (2004), few attention has been paid to visitors' views in part because "tourism products... [include] that tourists 'do not care' (about sustainability) and if they do care, this concern for the environment is not shown in practice" (p. 416). However, visitors may be able to see things that residents cannot, and may have different perceptions of and opinions about tourism development for an area than local residents and politicians. To address this gap in the literature, this study examines how visitors perceive tourism development in West Virginia.

West Virginia, nicknamed the "Mountain State," is the second most rural state in the nation; 20 of the state's 55 counties are 100 percent rural and an additional 14 are 75 percent rural, according to the U.S. Census Bureau definition (West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources, 2007). West Virginia has rich and abundant natural resources and has great potential for environment-based tourism development. Tourism is the second largest industry in the state in terms of

Tourism Programs

Understanding Tourism for Michigan Communities (UTMC) - This interactive workshop highlights tourism industry statistics and exposes communities to trends and travelers' interests, as well as a number of niche tourism markets. UTMC is specifically designed to promote regional synergies, leadership and tourism product development.

Planning for Tourism - This workshop walks communities through a planning process and uses life-cycle models to explore where communities may be in establishing themselves as tourism destinations. Additional tools will be employed to determine their readiness, identify next steps for action and explore engagement strategies for coalition building within the community.

First Impressions: Assessing Your Community for Tourism (FIT) - FIT is a comprehensive community assessment conducted by unannounced visitors in a host community positioned to lead development based on the program results. FIT involves developing community leadership, assessing the host community, sharing the results in a community forum open to all, and providing suggestions to drive community action. Overall, FIT helps communities learn about their strengths and weaknesses through the eyes of first-time visitors.

Strengthening Tourism Leadership: Facilitation Tools to Move Community-driven Tourism Forward - This experiential workshop is designed to build and strengthen the skills necessary to lead and facilitate productive community groups. Participants will practice using a variety of facilitation tools and learn techniques and verbal skills necessary to lead group discussions, reach consensus, set outcome-based goals and generate ideas for action.

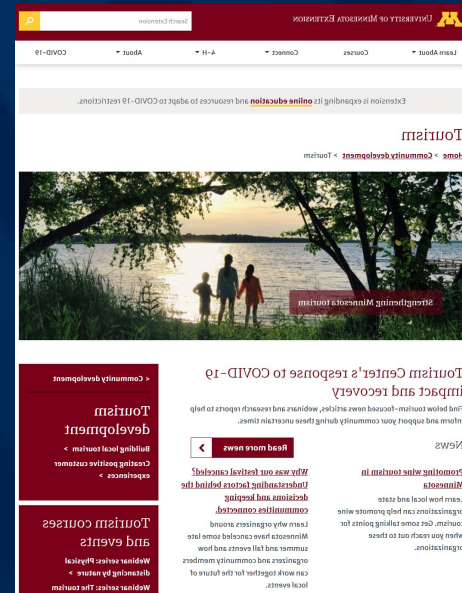

Custom Tourism Programs - MSU Extension tourism educators are equipped to meet the diverse needs and interests of Michigan communities. Specialized programs are available to communities with a specific interest in agri-tourism, eco-tourism and/or cultural/heritage tourism.

Sedona Sustainable Tourism Plan

Connecting Sedona visitors to long-term destination sustainability

The co-created plan provided concrete strategies to address resident quality of life, the local environment, the quality of the economy, and visitor experiences (Vogt, Andereck, and Pham, 2020).

Destination Development Program

The Destination Development Program exists to address the need to drive economic growth in rural Colorado through education, funding, and support with the goals of increasing visitor spending, strengthening local economies, and creating new travel experiences.

Goals of the Destination Development Program:

1. Increase traveler spending through creation and branding of new traveler experiences in less visited areas
2. Empower rural destination partners to develop and promote tourism assets
3. Be inclusive of all industry segments
4. Support development of programs to enhance visitor readiness

We also provide assistance within these specific industry segments:

1. Culinary & Agritourism
2. Heritage & Cultural Tourism
3. Rural Adventure Tourism

Rural Tourism Studio

Oregon's visitors and residents are looking for experiences in every region—no matter how far off the beaten path. Visitors are especially interested in taking advantage of Oregon's abundant outdoor recreational activities, natural and cultural landscapes, and food and farm experiences.

Oregon's Rural Tourism Studio is a robust training program designed to help rural communities develop and offer high-value, authentic experiences to travelers—in a sustainable, manageable way. The Rural Tourism Studio helps strengthen Oregon's position as a premier destination while also stimulating the local economy, protecting and enhancing local resources, and fostering community pride.

Participating communities build a team committed to tourism, often including community leaders, tourism entrepreneurs, tour operators, lodging property owners, outdoor recreation enthusiasts, restaurateurs and anyone interested in local tourism. Through a community-based workshop series, they create a shared vision and a big-picture strategy for tourism and then dive deep to create new tourism offerings in culinary and agritourism, outdoor recreation, bicycling tourism, cultural heritage tourism and more.

Mission Statement

The Tucker County Convention & Visitor's Bureau, a private, non-profit sales and marketing corporation will, through aggressive sales, marketing and informational campaigns, strive to establish the Canaan Valley/Blackwater Falls/Tucker County area as a premier vacation, meeting, and special event destination thereby enhancing the tourism economy in Tucker County.

The Tucker County Convention & Visitors Bureau's (CVB) mission is to support, sustain and assist in the growth of the Tourism industry in the county. To fulfill that mission, the CVB expends the majority of its budget on advertising. In 2016, the ratio of expenditures was 83% advertising to 17% operations. In 2017, the ratio of expenditures was 86% advertising to 14% operations. The 2018 budget is projected to spend 75% advertising and 25% on operations. *Noted ratio change from previous years to loss of Matching Advertising Partnership Program grant funding.

Vision for the Future

Goals: Broad, long-term aims that define accomplishment of the mission.

Actions: Specific steps to be taken, by whom and by when, to implement a strategy

Person/Committee Responsible: Person taking the lead to accomplish objective

Resources Needed: Resources needed to accomplish the objective. Could be internal or external

Timeline: When you plan to accomplish the objective

Evaluation: How will you know you accomplished the objective?

Certified Destination Management Executive (CDME) Credential

The Certified Destination Management Executive (CDME) is the tourism industry's highest individual educational achievement.

The CDME program prepares senior executives, who want to advance their careers to blend theory with experience and application of knowledge to help industry leaders thrive in a constantly changing environment. The program focus is on vision, leadership, productivity and implementing business strategies.
