Burlington, Vermont

Uniting Natural Resources & Community Development

About the Conference:

The 2016 Conference will bring together two professional association memberships with many similarities and compatible focus areas. The theme of the conference is: Building a Path to Resiliency: Uniting Natural Resources and Community Development and the expected attendance is 400 to 500 professional educators and academic leaders from every state and beyond. Attendees will be very interested in economic and environmental sustainability, resources for communities, natural resources stewardship, building social and human capital, energy and resource conservation, tools for citizen outreach and more.

Why Sponsor or Exhibit?

These two national organizations are meeting together for the first time, creating a ground floor opportunity for companies, agencies and organizations interested in making critical connections with customers who are educators, researchers and change agents working in Land Grant Universities and in communities in every county in the United States. Investment in this conference will provide opportunity for reaching new customers with the access and influence to share products, services and ideas back home. The Sheraton Burlington is a perfect venue for hosting an attractive professional trade show with ample opportunity for exposure and conversation. Sponsors and exhibitors will be an important part of the culture of the 2016 ANREP/NACDEP Conference!

About our organizations

At the core of both organizations is the work of educating citizens, landowners, farmers, homeowners, business owners and youth in research-based strategies for improved quality of life, viability and profitability. NACDEP (National Association of Community Development Extension Professionals) and ANREP (Association of Natural Resources Extension Professionals) are sister organizations with similar purposes, primarily serving as the professional association for extension agents, university educators and researchers. Both organizations are governed by elected volunteer board members, have a broad membership base and hold regular professional meetings in different locations around the country. The University of Vermont Extension is honored to be the host of the 2016 conference. Located on the shores of Lake Champlain, nestled between the Adirondack and the Green mountain ranges and known for environmental innovations, the vibrant city of Burlington is an ideal setting for learning about and experiencing the unification of natural resources and community development.
